

Edoardo Caterina

After graduating with honors in Law from the University of Florence in 2015, I received my PhD from the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna in Pisa in 2020. At the Scuola Sant'Anna, I defended a thesis in Constitutional Law. I have been licensed to practice law. In October 2022, I got the national scientific qualification (ASN) as associate professor of Constitutional Law, by unanimous judgment of the jury.

I am currently a research fellow in Constitutional Law at the University of Macerata and an adjunct professor at the University of Florence. During my studies I carried out several research stays abroad in Germany, in particular in Düsseldorf, where I was Gastwissenschaftler at the PRuF Institute of the Heinrich-Heine University, and in Berlin, where I was a DAAD fellow at the Humboldt University. My main research interests are in political party law, election law, and constitutional history. Following a public selection on the basis of qualifications, written test and oral test, since October 2022 I have served as a consultant of the Research Department of the Italian Constitutional Court, where I provide expertise on the German-speaking legal systems.
